467; P1254; Jean-Edme Julliot; Snuffbox; 1776-1777; French

Rectangular snuffbox with six Sevres porcelain plaques mounted 'à cage' in gold. The gold cagework is simply tooled with rounded mouldings, the vertical corners being fluted to resemble pilasters. The outer and inner surfaces of the lid are painted with figure scenes depicting scenes from the adventures of Telemachus, on the outer surface 'Telemachus tells his adventures to Calypso' and on the inside 'Minerva protects Telemachus from the shafts of Cupid'. The outer surface of the base of the box is also painted with a figure subject 'Telemachus in the Oasis comforted by the Priest of Apollo, Termosiris'. The plaques on the front and back of the box are painted with trophies of war set in landscape, and the plaques on either side of the box are painted with pastoral trophies, also set in a

	landscape. Inside the box is not lined, and all but the plaque on the inside of the lid of the box are undecorated and glazed. Dimensions (mm): 35 x 80 x 56 Catalogue no: 53

Made of gold and enriched with translucent, opaque and painted enamels the etui contains an ivory pencil and two ivory tablets. It was made to commemorate the Treaty of Teschen, signed on 13 May 1779 that ended the war of the Bavarian succession. It is decorated on either side with translucent blue enamel on an engine-turned ground contained within borders of gold enriched with a border of leaves enamelled in translucent green with opaque enameled 'pearls' on a matted ground. Within the blue enameled panels on the faces of the etui there are elongated octagonal registers with a gold border. The field of the registers contain painted enamel figure scenes, those on the lid show double opposed profile portraits of the statesmen involved in the Treaty, on one side Fredrick the Great of Prussia faces Louis XVI, and on the other Catherine the Great of Russia faces Joseph II of Austria. Those on the body of the etui have allegorical scenes on one side Peace and Minerva join hands above a shield with the arms of France, and on the other two female figures join hands above an altar on which burns an offering, next to these figures are the arms of France and Austria. Dimensions (mm): 90 x 54 diam. Catalogue no: 65

The cagework around the lid is chased with a border of ovals interlaced with foliated scrolls, and the sides of the box are decorated with eight corinthian pilasters hung with drapery swags, one on each of the corners. The border around the base of the box is chased with husks. The ten miniature paintings are attributed to the one of the Van Blarenberghes and they all show pastoral scenes of country life. On the lid there is a man playing a flageolet outside a cottage. On the base a woman spinning. The miniature on the forward facing side of the box shows four figures on a see-saw, and there are three further scenes which include a scene of a dance and one of fruit picking. The four shortest sides have tall thin miniatures with landscapes. All the paintings are in the style of J.-B. Huet, and the scene of the see-saw may even be based on a painting by him of this subject.

The cagework is chased with borders of acanthus and laurel, and there are four fluted pilasters, one on each of the canted corners. Four of the miniatures are identifiable. That on the lid depicts the start of the journey of the huge block of granite that was used for the base of Falconet's statue of Peter the Great in St Petersburg, ordered by Catherine the Great in 1766. The miniature on the base shows the block of granite arriving in St Petersburg, two years after its journey had begun. On the forward facing side of the box the miniature depicts Catherine the Great visiting a military academy, where she is seen examining plans and models of fortifications whilst troops parade outside, seen through open arches. The miniature on the right side of the box shows an interior of the Foundling Hospital established in Moscow in 1764. The scene on the reverse side of the box depicts a harbour with a pyramid and figures dressed in Turkish costume, which may represent the Crimea. The
