

Bacchus is the Roman god of the grape harvest, wine and winemaking as well as fertility and theatre.

In Ancient Greece, he was known as Dionysus.

Wine played an important part in Greek and Roman culture, and so Bacchus is often shown wearing grapes. Sometimes he is shown with ivy and a snake.

The Romans had a special festival to celebrate him, called Bacchanalia.